

Join the IWA and support our work.

“The IWA occupies a unique place in Welsh public life. Its analysis of current issues is always professional and extremely helpful.”

Lord Richard of Ammanford
Chairman of the Richard Commission

“In a time of transition for Wales, politically, the Institute of Welsh Affairs provides a vital forum for all sides to come together over both strategically important and contentious issues.”

Baroness Ilora Finlay of Llandaff, Professor of Palliative Medicine, Cardiff University

“The IWA is a quite extraordinarily valuable body, and I am very proud to be a member of it.”

Lord (Kenneth) Morgan
One of Wales's leading historians

The work of the IWA depends on the support and contribution of individual members across Wales and beyond who share our determination to mobilise the nation's human and social resources in order to face the challenges ahead. By bringing together partners in business, academia, and the public and voluntary sectors, the IWA is helping to shape economic, social, educational, environmental and cultural policy across Wales.

Improving Welsh procurement

Conference
Parc Thistle Hotel, Cardiff
Monday 5th November 2012

Chair: Gerald Holtham, Trustee, IWA

Public procurement is an important driver for economic development and employment. At some £4.3 billion the Welsh public sector's annual procurement budget is one of the main economic policy levers in Welsh hands.

tenders they make by providing adequate feedback? How are we addressing the skills gap that exists amongst Welsh procurement professionals? How can we push the profile of procurement management higher up policy ladder?

But how effectively are we using it? Are we achieving the right balance between risk management and creativity in public procurement, especially with contracts below the EU thresholds? Are we encouraging Welsh SMEs to learn from the

This conference explores how the creative use of public procurement can help us maximise the impact of public spending in Wales.
